

Olympic Debate

As the Olympic committee debated whether to postpone the Olympics due to the Covid19 outbreak, Year 10 PE students researched the economic impact of such a cancellation. The students were encouraged to use News articles to gather your information. BBC News, BBC Sport, Twitter articles and their own opinion could be included.

Here are some lovely examples from Harry King, Libby Chapman and Issy Bunting:

Issy Bunting:

It could affect peoples jobs and health
Jobs	health
<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Jobs to people who work in the media will be lost as they would not be needed, and the media companies will want to save money. Coaches of the athletes that are not competing anymore will be affected. The staff people who would help serve food and drink will be affected and they would lose a lot of business. Chinas economy will just be all round affected. 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> The athletes that were meant to be competing will not have as much drive and ambition to stay fit. They will be no promotion for different sport meaning less people will be inspired to play it making a population of people unfit. Not good for the athlete's mental health as they might feel like they have worked for something their whole lives and its all gone down the drain. But it is all done to keep healthy and COVID-19 free.
